*From the four corners of the earth
From six continents, seven seas
and several archipelagoes,
From points of land moved by wind
and water
Out of where they used to be to where they are,
The people of the earth marched and travelled To gather babbling, "Where to now? what next?"*

From Florida or New York From Oklahoma or North Carolina From various backgrounds The college community emerges Working together Playing together Often praying together You learn to give To tolerate To express You're part of the group You're an individual Moving to a particular goal Moving toward an unsure goal Moving and growing together.

*The people laugh.
From a light easy humming
to the racous guffaw and the brutal jeer
the people laugh . . .
In the daily labor of the people by and through which life goes on the people must laugh or go down.*

Laughing together in class Laughing alone in the shower Rolling down the hill Or trudging up Time out in the library A birthday party at midnight Study breaks at the Club A journey through Third floor
Academic Friday nights in Staunton
You learn to enjoy laughing Sometimes you have to enjoy laughing.

*And man the stumbler and finder, goes on,
man the dreamer of deep dreams,
man the shaper and maker,
man the answerer*

Whatever the questions, you've come to think
Along the line, you learn to question
New ideas Or new slants on old ideas
Reaching out for help Studying alone
One thing's for sure You've more to think about Things you never thought of before Even things you didn't think important
You see that thinking is active.

The growth of a frail flower in a path up has sometimes shattered and split a rock.

*Everything is in the books.
Too many books overland the mind.*

Rummaging through well-kept stacks You're surrounded by books And you learn from books You also learn from sidewalk discussions Faculty-student forums Speakers on the university lecture circuit Readers' Theatre and chapel You learn through participation In Apple Day or Sophomore Show In tennis or basketball You learn by involvement With a blind child With a welfare family at Christmas On a one-to-one basis You learn by observation By the change of seasons You learn by watching someone close to you grow.

People and people rising and fading with the springs and autumns, people like leaves out of the earth in spring, like leaves down the autumn wind —

New faces replace the old Becoming new friends ing some traditions fade Helping to initiate new You find yourself looking up to seniors Then you are trends You see the community evolve You're one Working for four years, more or less Watch- part of the evolvement .

*The people, yes, the people,
Everyone who got a letter today
And those the mail-carrier missed, ...*

*The people is a polychrome,
a spectrum and a prism
held in a moving monolith,
a console organ of changing themes,
a clavilux of color poems . . .*

Meshing together Yet remaining many-faceted The student body is alive Discovering someone else's viewpoint Exploring new areas You give some of your own thoughts You accept some from others Living and working together You learn to appreciate differences.

After one year at Mary Baldwin, I can best comment on the office of Chaplain by noting a symbolic act that I completed five minutes ago. I took the sign that read "Chaplain" off my door and replaced it with one that reads "Mr. Beauchamp." A small gesture, granted, but it signifies several big ideas about what college is and how "religion" shows itself on campus.

First, college is a rite of passage from adolescence to adulthood. It calls for the education of the whole person, not just of the mind. Emotions and value commitments need educating as well as thought processes. College, then, must be a personalized, humanized environment where the meaning of life, my life, is attended to, as well as the increase of knowledge and intellectual acumen. Only "people" can bring off that larger process of becoming, not "officials." Hence I prefer to be known as "Mr. Beauchamp" instead of "the chaplain."

Second, even though traditional expressions of the religious life, such as chapel services and chaplains, are more often avoided than sought out by students, the religious quest is, nevertheless, the most vital force on campus. Students do seem to want and need a sense of meaning and a source of stability, and that is what religious faith is all about. But the trappings of religious traditions do not stand for or satisfy these needs for many. By shedding my title I can relate to the substantive religious quest as I find it on campus without unnecessary obstacles.

Mary Baldwin is a real (not perfect) community where real (not perfect) people are involved together in the real process of discovering, ever more fully, what is Real and Worthy. The price that I and anyone must pay to join that community and participate in that process is to be real myself, to give you my name instead of a title. Paradoxical as it may seem, taking the "chaplain" sign off my door may be the most "religious" act I have committed all year.

I'm Richard Beauchamp. Who are you? If we can follow up that beginning, a whole liberal education, and maybe even an experience of the Holy, awaits us.

Richard Beauchamp
Chaplain

Career Planning

As business and industry seek educated women for corporate leadership, and the government insists that they do so, how does a women's college respond?

With an intensive program, not only to find jobs for the graduates, but also to acquaint them with challenges in a variety of business careers for the inevitable working years in the life of American women today.

This has been the response of Mary Baldwin College. Inaugurated this year, the business awareness program includes orientation sessions during vacation periods and summer internships with national and local firms.

Also in the awareness program are "businessmen-in-residence," a review of the curriculum to identify appropriate new courses, expanded career counseling, and a stepped-up schedule of visits by industrial recruiters.

Twenty-five students participated in the college's first orientation-to-business during the January recess in a program which was new to most of the industries. They spent a week in various national and local industries, studied programs and tried special projects.

In another facet of the new program, successful alumnae of Mary Baldwin have assisted students in exploring career requirements and opportunities. In a "career conference," alumnae related their experiences in such fields as personnel, management, banking, publishing and insurance.

People

Administration

The Bluestocking is an important document for each graduating class at Mary Baldwin College for it captures, in a very personal and special way, the experiences which are to be treasured for many years to come. It is a distinct privilege to have this opportunity to become part of this history of the Class of 1972.

I have known you for three years and have enjoyed working closely with you in various ways as we have carried forward, together, programs for the betterment of Mary Baldwin. Perhaps the highest compliment which can be paid this class is to say that the college is far richer as a result of your being here. Whether in academic achievement, student organizations and activities, or other college responsibilities, you have shown a high degree of dependability and personal integrity. We shall miss you on campus but look forward to important new accomplishments for each member in the years to come.

William W. Kelly
President

CAMP
MARY BALDWIN
COUNSELOR

I believe in rationality. It is fragile, elusive, and frequently unpopular, yet it creates and sustains civilized life.

I believe that clear-headed and clear-sighted people will never be irrelevant in any world.

I believe that human beings were made for happiness, and that happiness accrues to those who learn to do something well.

I know that rationality can become sterile, heads confused, and eyes unfocused. I know that happiness can be missed. The enemies within and without are strong, and often look like friends. Yet I believe that each person can become rational, can learn to do something well, and can in the exercise of his gifts find joy.

That is what I think education is all about.

Marjorie B. Chambers
Academic Dean

The world has changed and the college along with it, and change it must. No longer can it be a safe little enclave, a refuge for four years. Students today are quite different from those of 30 years ago. When I came to Mary Baldwin many students graduated before they reached the then-voting age of 21; now an overwhelming majority have reached the now-voting age of 18 before they matriculate. That alone makes a great difference.

Yet we must not abandon all that has gone before. Hopefully, we shall retain the best of the past and press on to an even better future. This would be my hope for the college.

*The sea moves always, the wind moves always.
 They want and want and there is no end to their wanting.
 What they sing is the song of the people.
 Man will never arrive, man will be always on the way.
 It is written he shall rest but never for long.*

4 *The sea and the wind tell him he shall be lonely, meet love,
 be shaken with struggle, and go on wanting.*

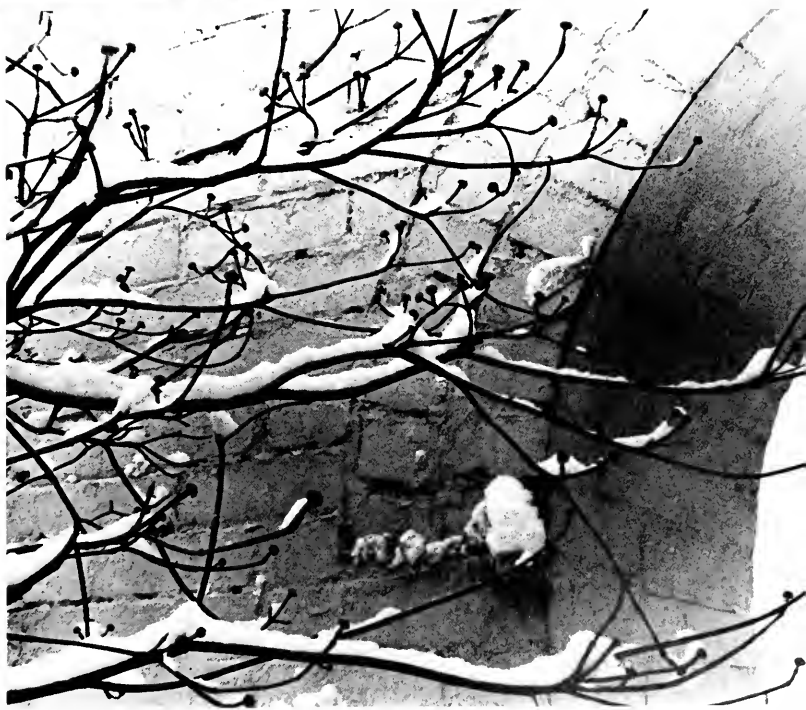

*And you take hold of a handle
by one hand or the other by the better or worse hand
and you never know
maybe till long afterward
which was the better hand.*

*There are dreams stronger than death.
Men and women die holding these dreams.
Yes, "stronger than death"; let the hammers beat on this slogan.*

*Tell him to be a fool every so often and to have no shame over having been a fool yet learning something out of every folly hoping to repeat none of the cheap follies thus arriving at intimate understanding of a world numbering many fools . . .
Tell him to be different from other people
if it comes natural and easy being different . . .
Let him seek deep for where he is born natural.*

*People are what they are because they have come out of what was.
Therefore they should bow down before what was and take it and say it's good — or should they?*
